PARTICIPANTS NEEDED:

Should I Stay, or Should I Go?: Evaluating the Role of Climate and Weather Stressors on Moving Decisions In Southeast Florida

About this Study:

This study will analyze how South Floridians are experiencing and responding to climate and weather stressors (i.e., floods, extreme heat, hurricanes), and how these stressors are potentially influencing residential moving decisions. Participants will take a short online screening survey prior to participating in an online focus group session.

You are eligible if you are:

- 18 years or older
- A current or past resident (within 5 years) of one of the following neighborhoods:
 - Durrs
 - Dorsey-Riverbend
 - Progresso Village
- Available for a 12-question survey followed by an approximately 45-minute online focus group

Benefits of Participation:

- Learning more about local flood risk in your community and measures to help protect your household from climate and weather threats; advocating for yourself and your community; and helping inform decision-makers and planners about community needs.
- Participants who complete the focus group will receive a $40 gift card for their time.

How to Participate:

- Scan the attached QR code with your smartphone or tablet to indicate your availability for a focus group session.
- Space is limited, register early!

When?

- Wednesday, January 7, 2026, via Zoom. Participants will receive a $40 gift card.
